On Saturday, August 3rd, the Sunrise Theatre Foundation held its annual themed fundraiser. This year, attendees were transported back to New York City in 1979 as the Foundation Board transformed the Theatre into the famous dance and celebrity club Studio 54 (Studio 117 a play on the Theatre's address).

Participants were able to enjoy a display of exotic cars before they were greeted at the velvet ropes of the Theatre's entrance by bouncers, who "selected" who would be let in. Once inside, the sights and sounds of the disco beat lured folks into the Theatre's main stage which was transformed into a large dance floor and bar. Music was provided by DJ extraordinaire Jay Barwick, with assistance from Ocean 97.1's legendary Hamp Elliot as the guest emcee. Celebrity look-alikes, Andy Warhol, Elton John, Dolly Parton and others from StageFright Academy mingled through the crowd the entire night. Dancers from Fred Astaire Studios in Port St Lucie led the crowd in dance lessons to sharpen their disco dancing skills, while aerialists from Florida Aerial Dance and Circus performed dazzling aerial dances from the rafters of the Theatre.

The BlackBox Theatre and the Friends Lounge were transformed into VIP areas, where guests were treated to culinary delights from True Roots Catering, Happy Garden Café, and Havana George Café.

The night was capped off with a silent auction featuring guitars and other items autographed by legendary artists who performed at the Sunrise Theatre during the 2023/24 season.

The proceeds of this event will help support the Foundation's mission of providing access to performances at the Sunrise Theatre to children of the Treasure Coast and to assist with various capital projects for the Theatre.

The Sunrise Theatre Foundation is already hard at work planning next year's gala named A Night in Las Vegas!
